Boulder Sentinel: Nate Vestal, once the sole owner of the famous Penobscot mine for which he received $340,000 in money, has been out of luck ever since. No matter what he undertakes, the result is against him. He is located in Flathead Lake country, but his ill luck follows him as will be seen by the following which we take from the Inter-Lake: "Nate Vestal, a ranchman on the east side, started last Friday for the nead of Big Fork, where he has a hay meadow, and as he was about to enter his boat, with his rifle, it was in some way accidentally discharged, sending the ball through his left for the past side. Fine Fur Emporium. The Fred Stolba Far company, of Chicago, will have for inspection at the corset and kid glove parlors, some thirty different designed fur garments of the newest and very latest style, for a few days longer. This old and reliable firm have gained for themselves a world-wide reputation for their most perfect fitting garments and in York. Ladies who are contemplating the display. Mr. Wenrich, the manager for this firm, is prepared to take measures for any style or shape of garment you desire, make it to order without any extra charge. The samples he has displayed, and which have been so much admired by so many of Halena's ladies he will dispose of at a no longer anything to do with it. The circular will be explicit. It will state that ores of 'lead mines,' no matter how little lead they might contain, if the lead is saved by smelting or any other process, the importer of the ores must pay duty of $30 per ton."

Sept. 5 Secretary Windom told an Associated Press reporter the matter had not been acted upon by the treasury department, except that collectors were instructed to prevent the fraudulent importation of ores from Mexico. Thus, it will be seen, the dispatch in the Salt Lake Tribone was, according to the head of the department, somewhat overdrawn.

The samples he has displayed, and which have been so much admired by so many of Helena's ladies, he will dispose of at a bargain, as he does not wish to lug them back to Chicago with him again, where he is going direct from here next Wednesday, the 11th inst. Anyone giving him their order for a garment before he leaves Helena will get it yet, at the full summer prices, and have it made up in time cold weather requires it. Every garment sold by this firm is made in their own factory; for that reason they have no second profit to divide with the middlemen. They warrant every garment they sell.

Ladies will do well by calling at The Bee Hive before purchasing their fall underwear and hosiery.

Porter, Muth & Cox have sold to Col. Broadwater six acres of land adjoining the hotel and natatorium.

This land will be used for park purposes. There are a few choice lots facing on this park still for sale. Call early to secure the best.
